Predictors of long-term retention of alcohol treatment-related skills in older adults. The study examined long-term retention of Alcohol Treatment Outcomes Study (ATOS) skills by older adult alcoholics participating in a maintenance treatment program. The sample was comprised of 130 alcoholic men and women who were interviewed 4 years after their initial treatment participation. Significant correlations were found among both age, education, and pre-treatment alcohol and drug use as predictors of retention in five of the six ATOS domains (decreasing drinking, increasing drinking limitations, maintaining abstinence, practicing relaxation, and coping with craving). As expected, older adult subjects were significantly more likely to retain control over drinking than were their younger counterparts. There was a trend for younger subjects to exhibit better overall retention of ATOS skills, but the results were not statistically significant. Implications for policy and practice are discussed. 1. Space Trip 3D Screensaver Screenshots: According to the source, the Landlord refused to make any repairs or improvements to the property, as rent was not paid. Unhappy tenants were demanding repairs, saying that the ceiling was mouldy and that the property had no running water or electricity. The lawyers for the Landlord pointed out that the rent was not paid as required by the tenancy agreement, however, the magistrate ruled that the tenants' solicitor's application be granted. The source said: "The case has highlighted to us the need for more housing providers to be more open and transparent about the costs and maintenance of property. "The courts are not exactly renowned for being transparent and this case has shown there are in fact breaches of tenancy agreements being made public and, when this happens, there are no consequences for the breaching tenant. "We have also heard of a number of landlords being forced to close down due to tenants refusing to pay rent and because of the perceived lack of transparency from landlords." If a landlord fails to keep a property in good order or fails to pay the rent on time, they are liable to be put in possession and legal action is possible if the tenant feels he has been treated unfairly. Aha! New Yorkers Are 'Diverting' Their Trash Into the Ocean While Waiting for Their Billion-Dollar Tunnel! New York is on its way to blowing nearly $20 billion on a failed, long-stalled tunnel project that it would rather spend the money on instead of the State's crumbling infrastructure. The Metropolitan Transportation Authority (MTA) had ordered a contractor to cut two long, deep holes in the ground and connect them, and now, the MTA has admitted that they have
