I am trying to find $$\int^{\pi}_0 \cos(\sin x)dx$$ I tried to parameterize $\sin x$ as u and found $\cos(u)du$ but still couldnt get anywhere. A: You have done quite well. Let $u = \sin x$. Then, $du = \cos x \, dx$, so that $du = \sin x \cos x \, dx$. It follows that $$ \int^{\pi}_0 \cos(\sin x) \, dx = \left[\

I'm moving out of the office before the end of the year (7 months) and asked my manager if I should report it for getting a bigger office. He said that I should, so I'm going to report it. A: You should not, unless the new place offers more long-term benefits. You don't want to use up all your savings just for a temporary move. In the future you will have more time to search for other opportunities and it would be a much less stressful move than in the middle of the year. A: You should definitely report it. Without your manager knowing, you'll already have earned a few months of earnings while working from your existing office - and will have a much easier time negotiating when it comes time to move. When you move in 7 months, you're going to be very frustrated when you know you could have moved in 3 and saved yourself a lot of hassle. I'd advise you report it - and make sure you have a good reason for moving so late. Moving at the start of the year would seem much more likely to be a 'budget' move. Q: How to know this method to certain mathematical function The function $f(x)$= $\frac{ln(x)}{sin(x)}$ has the following local minimum a) at $x=\pi$ b) at $x=1$ c) at $x=0$ d) none of the above I know for c i should use absolutly value but how to solve this? A: Another way of looking at it is to split the function into two parts: $f(x)=\frac{\ln x}{\sin x$ 6d1f23a050
