game logic the game logic is the part of your game that interacts with the player. more info see in glossary. most games have several parts to their game logic: a player movement part that moves the player around the screen, a combat system that tells the player what to do when the game is in combat, and a scoring system that calculates the player's score. you should divide the game logic into separate scripts that perform these various tasks. if you think this is all there is to making an adult game, then you're wrong. a lot goes into making a great adult game and you need to be as creative as possible to make sure that your game is good. and not just good, but good enough to be considered adult. it is worth noting that even though the great majority of adult games are non-realistic, there are a few games that feature very realistic graphics. the best of those games are very realistic looking, and may even be as realistic as a game with more cartoony graphics. but the big question is, how do you do this? you may start by downloading some of our ready made adult game templates that we have created to give you an idea of how you can make a great adult game of your own. but the important thing is to make it as good as you can. this means that while you are making your game, you should be looking at other adult games you may find online and taking notes. you can read the comments left by other game developers and see if their game design is something you can try out in your own game. all adult games are ready made. but make sure that you go to the source and check out the authors of the game. you never know, the next time you play an adult game, you might find something cool. and of course, you should read the review. as long as you stick to the review of the game, you should be fine. but if you are not sure about something, ask the author. remember, they are the one that made the adult game and they may have an idea or advice that you might not have thought of.
