It's a really elegant app. It is not perfect, but it does the job, which is a lot. Hi-I've been using it for a while, and it is really great. You can't use it all the time, because it is too heavy - it starts to feel slow - when you really need to use it. But even when it did slow to a snail's pace, and that was most of the time. I was not really affected. I use the pencil a lot and Photoshop is a very good tool for all the photo editing. It's fantastic. You can use it anywhere. It installs on any other machine, and it works very well. Personally, I think it should be free - this is a dream for the photo blob! You really don't need to pay too much for it. It's a good price. When you have been using it for a while, as I do, you can comfortably see how good it really is. With the Adobe Pencil, the word »free« is taken away. Now you have to pay for LS or Express Edition. How can anyone make such a simple thing? There's virtually no feature for free? All features, including the cloud option, has to be paid. This is nothing else than piracy. Bravo, Adobe. I've been using the free version of Adobe Photoshop for years and always have. There's nothing I don't like about it. All problems I had, they've been resolved with updates. However, the ease with which this version might be installed is very irritating (and that's a simple word) as is the total lack of any real feedback on errors or any error coding. Since 2004, we have seen a steady increase in the number of consumers starting to utilize Photoshop for their creative purposes and then bringing this work for us to review and approve. But, you probably noticed a decrease in the approvals of these submissions. There is no immediate evidence to think that the average length of the review process is changing and we work hard to make the review process consistent. It is difficult to track or monitor submissions in Photoshop as there are a lot of paths and people involved, however, what we do know is that we get fewer submissions each week. This is not unique to us and we do not notice it as a trend. If we do, we would look into the threads on our forums and see what is going on.
