We have cloned a cDNA of human liver fructose-1,6-bisphosphatase (EC 3.1.3.11) by use of a rat liver fructose-1,6-bisphosphatase cDNA as a probe. The sequence of the cDNA is identical to that of rat liver fructose-1,6-bisphosphatase except for one amino acid substitution. For the identification of amino acids of human fructose-1,6-bisphosphatase, site-directed mutagenesis was performed. The mutant of Lys-286 to Glu, the substitution seen in the human protein was selected and inserted into Escherichia coli expression system. Mutation of Lys-286 to Glu did not change the enzymatic activity and on the other hand increased the specific activity up to 1.5-times those of the control and authentic human fructose-1,6-bisphosphatase.
